Housing Design Awards

2002

Closing date
24 May 2002

The Housing Design Awards have been promoting excellence in housing design since 1937 and enjoy the support of The Scottish Executive and Communities Scotland.

2001 Awards

Entry requirements

1. Entries are restricted to work completed in Scotland in 2001.
2. Entries may be submitted by owners, builders, developers, architects, architectural technicians, public or semi-public bodies, and individuals who have commissioned works in Scotland.
3. Entry Fee: £30.00.

The awards

4. Award-winning entries will receive an illuminated diploma and a plaque for attachment to the building. Commended entries will receive a certificate.
5. A builder of award-winning or commended housing may receive an additional award on the recommendation of the Chartered Institute of Building.
6. The panel wishes to recognise excellence and innovation in housing design, and particularly projects that create a sense of place and identity within the environment in which they are located.

The projects may be:

- new-build
- restoration or reconstruction
- conversions of non-housing buildings
- single houses – new, reconstructed or converted.

7. In the report on public consultations for the development of an architectural policy for Scotland, concern was expressed about the quality and impact of private housing developments. The Housing Awards Panel shares this concern and is particularly keen to receive submissions from the private sector and others for low rise residential developments.

The Panel is also particularly interested in receiving submissions for private sector developments that form part of area regeneration initiatives, and projects that address issues of sustainability.

8. There is no restriction on the number of housing units in any development.

9. The Panel will take into account the lay-out design, the groupings of dwellings and their external treatment, their relationship to the surrounding landscape, the use of colour and materials, and general detailing. Consideration will also be given to the interior planning of houses relative to their type and location, and how well homes accommodate those with disabilities.

10. A clearly distinct stage of a large development which has already received an award is eligible for an extension award.

11. While all types of construction will be considered, the Panel wishes to encourage good design in timber frame housing.

How to enter

14. Entries should be presented in an A4 loose leaf binder with the title of the development and the date of the submission on the outer cover.

The A4 binder should contain:

- a location map, plan and OS reference
 - site layout plan, showing the context
 - a short description of the project covering the client's brief, features of the site, numbers and mix of dwelling types and house design
 - drawings – block plans
 - house/flat layout plans (1:100/1:50)
 - elevations, sections, etc
- all to be at A4 or A3 format, suitable for reproduction.
- photographs – (maximum 8) of publishable quality.
 - 3 mounted 35mm transparencies (minimum)
 - a list of the full design team.

15. The Saltire Society may wish to retain for record or exhibition purposes, drawings, photographs and colour transparencies of all entries.

Entries should be sent,
to arrive by noon on Friday 24 May 2002 to:
